Addressing Chronic Conditions

Over 133 million Americans currently suffer with chronic illness—that's one in 5 people! Collectively, this group spends about 78% of all healthcare dollars. Many of these patients look normal, but manage a wide range of "invisible" symptoms, including diabetes, thyroid disorders, fatigue, musculoskeletal pain, autoimmune illnesses and intense gastrointestinal syndromes.

Conventional medicine offers little hope for the chronically ill, so understanding these cases and offering effective solutions has never been more important. We are fortunate to have Lee Carroll back in Utah to continue our herbal education by addressing the significant role that western herbal medicine plays in the prevention and treatment of these common health conditions.

Topics to be Covered:

- Musculoskeletal support, including treatment goals and strategies for osteoarthritis and osteoporosis
- Weakened immunity, infection prevention and increased cellular response
- Autoimmune theory, traditional knowledge and approaches, current research, and clinical cases
- Role of gastrointestinal dysbiosis on common chronic cases, limitations of a purely probiotic approach, benefits of antimicrobial herbs and fiber supplementation
- Adrenal support and improving stamina and energy
- Clinical and sub-clinical thyroid conditions, including hyper and hypothyroidism
- Metabolic syndrome and blood sugar regulation, including diabetes
- Sound holistic framework for each topic and review of herbs and nutrients as a viable protocol

Who Should Attend:

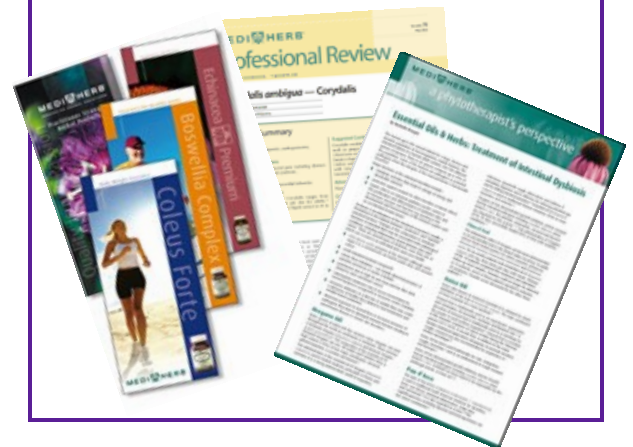

Health care practitioners, healthcare students and staff active in clinical care.

* 8 CEUs available for Chiropractors (see back)

About Lee Carroll, B. Sc.

Lee Carroll was a member of the MediHerb® team for over 20 years, working alongside Kerry Bone, founder of MediHerb and Director of Research and Development. This relationship allowed Lee to develop a unique comprehension of the clinical applications of evidenced-based herbal medicine, as well as an understanding of Kerry Bone's personal insights. He worked directly with Standard Process® for 10 years, living in Wisconsin and experiencing the quality and methods of Standard Process first-hand. Now, Lee travels extensively throughout the United States conducting informative and practical seminars for healthcare professionals on the clinical application of western herbal medicine.
